What is Citation?

- Referencing is an acknowledgement of the sources of the information, ideas, thoughts and data which you have used in your work.
- Referencing requires you to acknowledge your sources in two places:
 - In-text citation: in the main body of your text by citing
 - Bibliographic reference: in the bibliography or list of references at the end of your work

Referencing is crucial to successful research !

Research by Goddard and Barrett (2007) found that standards of care vary across the country. This was confirmed by a survey of health professionals, in which 65% were dissatisfied with current arrangements (Professional survey, 2008). Liu et al. (2008) also established that care workers need additional support. ⁴

What is DOI?

A DOI, or Digital Object Identifier, is a string of numbers, letters and symbols used to permanently identify an article or document and link to it on the web. A DOI will help your reader easily locate a document from your citation. Think of it like a Social Security number for the article you're citing — it will always refer to that article, and only that one. While a web address (URL) might change, the DOI will never change.

- If your PDF has Digital Object identifiers (DOI) on it, after importing it, the bibliography information will be imported into EndNote Library at the same time.
- Allow Single PDF file and multiple PDF files (save in the same folder) import

Evaluation of the use of untargeted metabolomics in the safety assessment of genetically modified crops

M. Bedair and K. C. Glenn

Metabolomics 2020 Vol. 16 Issue 10

Accession Number: WOS:000578609200002 DOI: ARTN 11110.1007/s11306-020-01733-8

Background The safety assessment of foods and feeds from genetically modified (GM) crops includes the comparison of key characteristics, such as crop composition, agronomic phenotype and observations from animal feeding studies compared to conventional counterpart varieties that have a history of safe consumption, often including a near isogenic variety. The comparative compositional analysis of GM crops has been based on targeted, validated, quantitative analytical methods for the key food and feed nutrients and antinutrients for each crop, as identified by Building energy prediction has been an important research topic in recent decades due to its extensive use in thermal load prediction, systems optimization measurement and verification calibration, and retrofit analysis. A recent text-mining study of over 30,000 publications related to building energy efficiency and data science showed the growth of prediction techniques over the last decade. There are many types of building energy prediction methods, including traditional statistical time-series models, building simulation models (e.g. Energy Plus), and some popular machine learning models such as neural networks, deep learning, or tree-based models.

'Birdbrain' should actually be a compliment

Pioneers in avian intelligence have found that although birds' brains are very small, they are incredibly intelligent, and sometimes have surprising similarities to the behavior or brain functions of humans. Examples range from the cockatoo who was the first animal documented to dance to a beat to Irene Pepperberg's in-depth studies done with the African grey parrot Alex (named for Avian Learning EXperiment).(Laudato, 2010; Pepperberg, 1999) There have even been studies documenting that some birds successfully use, and even modify or build, tools.(Bird & Emery, 2009; Holzhaider et al., 2011; von Bayern et al., 2009)
